Time To Plant Spring-Flowering Bulbs

in fall (from now through Thanksgiving) because it corresponds to the end of their natural dormancy. Most of these plants begin root growth in fall, followed by a cool stratification period necessary for proper flower development and then shoot growth in late winter and early spring.

No matter which bulbs you select, remember that the largest bulbs will produce the greatest show next spring. However, smaller bulbs will still produce some flowers, and these may be the best choice for mass planting or naturalizing. Avoid any bulbs that feel lightweight as these may have severely dried during storage.

It's important to plant flowering bulbs at the proper depth, so inquire about plant depth at the nursery or follow the label directions. A light application of bone meal fertilizer at planting is often recommended, though probably not always necessary. Most bulbs do not need fertilization until growth emerges in the spring. When you see plants emerging, apply 1 to 2 pounds per 100 square feet of a complete fertilizer (like 10-10-10 blend).

Once flowering occurs, remove the faded blooms, but don't remove the foliage. The leaves produce sugars and other compounds necessary for the bulb to overwinter and bloom again the next spring. Most bulbs will enter dormancy in late spring or early summer and will renew growth, starting with the root system in the fall.

How to kill bamboo

If bamboo shoots have crept over from your neighbor's yard, cut the underground stems that connect each stalk. Then cut stalks to the ground. Water and fertilize the area to cause new growth, then cut down the new growth. Keep doing this until no more shoots come up. This will exhaust the energy stored in the stems underground; without green leaves to photosynthesize and produce new energy, they will no longer be able to send up new shoots.
