Happy Easter . . . it's snowing! I don't know why I think this is so unusual, I recall hunting eggs in the snow when I was little. I can even remember what I wore to Church that Easter Sunday so many years ago. I must have been eight or nine years old because I don't remember Beth being there but, I know I was wearing little, white anklet socks; black patent leather shoes; white gloves; straw purse; a pink dress and a straw hat. And boy was it cold outside! I wore a light weight, white poncho but that didn't do much to keep out the cold. When it came time to hunt eggs, I wore my winter coat. Funny the things you remember when it snows in April!

Easter -- The Celebration of Life

Thirty-three years ago at this time, I was posing for wedding photos, melting in my Mom's wedding gown, standing in the yard by our Dogwood tree. It was so hot but Momma wanted to get pictures of me in my gown with the Lilacs and Dogwoods in full bloom. I suppose the neighbors thought we were nuts, me tromping around the yard in that dress and big hat and veil. Daddy took some great pictures of me that day. Another April memory.

Seven years ago, on April 11th, Daddy passed away. Some think I struggle with his death because I speak of him so often in my column. Really, that's not the case at all. I cherish the wonderful memories I have of him and how could I possibly talk of my childhood (as I so often do) without talking about Daddy? We were lucky kids to have two, loving, caring parents who were always there for us. Through snowy Easter egg hunts, icy roads and beauty pageants, wedding pictures and a rainy day of Christmas tree cutting, I can't tell the stories without talking about Mom and Daddy. Even though April reminds me of that sad day, I cannot grieve because my Daddy loved the Lord and what better way to celebrate Easter than remembering Jesus and Daddy!

I hope your memories of April are wonderful too. Try to make some new ones this year, go to a sunrise service, color eggs even if your little ones are grown up and moved away, bake a rabbit cake or hide eggs for the neighborhood children. Easter is the celebration of life; Life after death, Life everlasting and Life as we choose to live it today. Make it a good one!

Happy Easter!
