Kentucky basketball is truly a family affair with our bunch, as I'm sure it is with many others in the community. Arranging weekend chores and plans

KY Basketball Is A Family Affair

around the 1:00 o'clock games was tricky, but I managed to get it all done. Saturday morning was the quickest trip to Wal-Mart I've EVER made! Corky couldn't believe it! I went in for two things, came out with two things and was on the road back home in plenty of time to watch the tip off. Sunday was a bit more challenging with Church, the family lunch at Mom's AND Kentucky basketball. It took a little planning but everyone got fed, although I don't think ANY of us tasted what we ate!

Mom always has lunch for the family on Sunday, we gather at 1:00 and enjoy a fine menu then lounge around visiting all afternoon. Sometimes it's not just family, but any extra mouths that happen along from Church with the kids, friends for a birthday celebration or visiting out-of-towners, they are all welcome at Momma's table. Now anyone that knows our Momma, knows that she bleeds blue like none other! She won't answer the phone, the door, NOTHING while a UK game is on! I've seen the woman launch a cat from her recliner in the excitement of a Kentucky basketball game so you can understand how the 1:00 o'clock tip off on Sunday had her quite distressed. The problem was how to get home from Church, get the family fed and be ready for the game, when generally we don't even gather until 1:00! Here's where me and my little sister stepped in. All Momma had to do was set the table and we provided the rest.

We figured a big kettle of vegetable soup, homemade pimento cheese sandwiches and homemade peanut butter and jelly (just like we used to have at school) would satisfy the gang gathered for the final game of the SEC Tournament. I filled bowls with soup while Beth poured glasses of sweet tea. We slapped sandwiches together, prayed after the Oak Ridge Boys sang the National Anthem and wolfed down lunch during commercial breaks and time outs. We wandered in and out of the kitchen, nibbling here and there on a little more soup, another sandwich or two and some chocolate chip cookies. The great-grand-baby ran from person to person yelling "basketball, basketball" and pointed at the television when we all cheered after a score. It was a wonderful afternoon topped off by Kentucky's win against Arkansas.

Before the final buzzer sounded, I looked around the room and smiled, saying a heartfelt, thank you prayer that we were all together. Momma happy in her recliner, dressed in blue from head to toe; the grandchildren and great grandson romping, whooping and hollering as we all cheered on the Cats; me and Beth along with our husbands, enjoying a rare afternoon of down time where we actually had nothing to do other than watch Kentucky basketball. It was a beautiful day full of sunshine and happiness and another victory for the University of Kentucky! All that and the game wasn't even close enough that Momma had to...launch a cat!

Now to make plans for Thursday night!!! GO CATS!!!
