IT TAKES ONE... to ENJOY the OTHER

Maudie's Naughties

Barking Dog

Junior is awakened one morning at 4 a.m. by his telephone ringing. "Your dog's barking, and it's keeping me awake," says an irate voice.

Junior finds Ole Blue sound asleep at the foot of the bed so he thanks the caller and politely asks his name before hanging up.

The next morning at 4 a.m., Junior calls back his neighbor and says, "Sir... it wasn't my dog."

Main Street Brawl

A young boy comes running into city hall looking for a policeman. Finding one, he pleads, "Officer, my dad and another man got into a fight at the post office, can you help break it up?"

After rushing up the street, sure enough, two men are fighting in front of the post office.

"Which one's your dad," asks the officer.

"I don't know," says the boy. "That's what they're fighting about."

Traffic Stop

Trixie is hired as a traffic officer. On her first traffic stop she pulls over her friend Barbie who is speeding in a 35 mile an hour zone. Trixie walks up to her car and asks Barbie for her driver's license.

Barbie searches frantically through her purse and finally asks, "What does it look like?"

Irritated, Trixie says, "It's got your picture on it."

Barbie digs around in her purse and finds a small rectangular mirror. She holds it up and sees her face and says, "Aha, this must be it," and hands it to Trixie.

"Yeah, that's it," says Trixie, looking into the mirror. "But I didn't know you were a cop."

Drunk Again

Two police officers notice Aunt Cora staggering down the street after a night on the town. Trying to do a favor for an elderly lady, they decide to take her home instead of jail. So they load her in the back of the cruiser and one officer sits back there with her to keep her from falling over.

They start driving around town looking for her house. They ask her several times where she lives, but every time she reaches over and grabs the officer's arm and says, "You're passionate."

After a couple of hours of this they start to get frustrated with her. "Look," says one officer. "We've driven you around town several times and you just want to get flirty and still haven't told us where you live!"

"I keep telling you," says Aunt Cora. "You're passing it!"

One Way

Ma and Pa are in town on the first of the month and Pa comes zipping up Sycamore Street and turns left in the wrong direction onto Broadway. "Uh-oh," says Pa. I just made an illegal turn."

"That's alright," says Ma. "That police car behind us did the same thing."

Speeder

A police officer pulls a man over for speeding. As the officer approaches the car he can see that the man is very anxious about something.

"Good afternoon Sir. Do you know why I stopped you?"

"Yes, officer... I know I was speeding... but it's a matter of life or death."

"Oh, really? How's that?"

"There's a naked woman waiting for me at home."

"I don't see how could be a matter of life or death."

"If I don't get home before my wife does," replies the speeder, "I'm a dead man."

Hot Date

A guy with a hot date parks alongside the road one night and they get into the back seat. After quite some time he decides he had better go home and rest because he has to work the next day, but she's not ready to go.

He sees a guy down the road changing a flat tire, so he tells his date he's getting out for a trip to the bushes.

Then, he tells the guy, "I'll change your flat tire if you'll get in the back seat of my car with my girlfriend." The guy agrees, and they trade places.

After awhile, a cop comes along and shines a light into the back of the car, "What are you doing in there," he says. "We've got laws against that around here."

"There's nothing wrong with a man getting romantic with his wife every once in awhile, is there" asks the guy?

"Well," says the officer, "Why don't you do that at home?"

"To tell you the truth," the guy answers. "I didn't know she was my wife myself until you shined the light on her."

The Marcum & Wallace Hospital Foundation recently funded a project at Mercy Primary Care-Irvine for the installation of an automatic door at the front entrance/exit of the building. Marcum & Wallace Receives ACR Lung Cancer Designation

Marcum & Wallace Hospital (MWMH) in Irvine is now a designated CT Lung Cancer Screening Center by the American College of Radiology (ACR) and participating in the Lung Cancer Screening Registry.

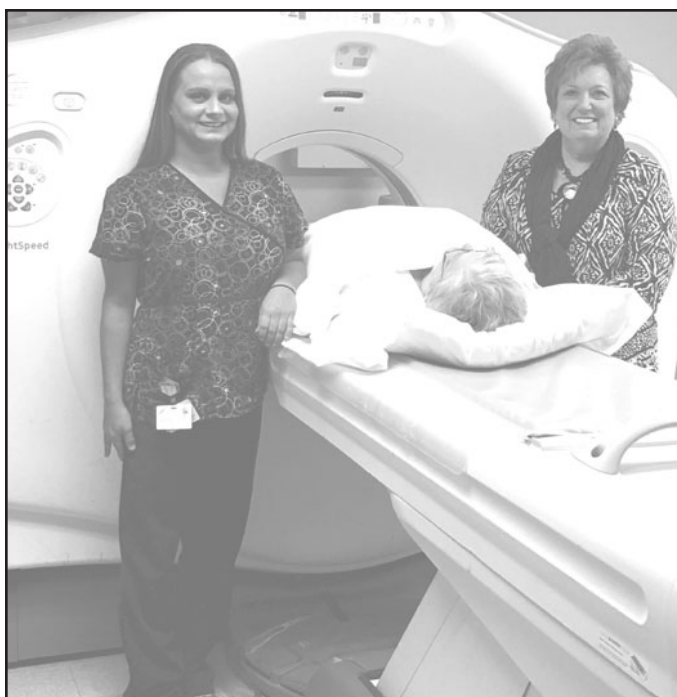

Participation in the registry is voluntary and allows the MWMH imaging facility to compare its lung cancer screening performance to other facilities nationwide. Healthcare providers and radiology staff can use these objective comparisons to advance our lung cancer screening practice, target specific areas for improvement, implement quality improvement programs, and improve patient care.

"Screening is an important tool in the fight against lung cancer," said Marcum & Wallace Radiology Director Sharon Whitaker. "An annual CT screening for people at high risk for lung cancer can save lives through early detection. This designation shows our commitment to patients of our region. Low dose CT screening for lung cancer carried out safely, efficiently and equitably will save tens of thousands of lives a year."

The ACR Lung Cancer Screening Registry (LCSR) is approved by the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services to meet Medicare quality reporting requirements. As part of the ACR National Radiology Data Registry (NRDR®), the LCSR leads the effort in developing benchmarks and comparisons to help imaging facilities improve quality of patient care.

For additional information about a CT Lung Cancer Screening, contact Sharon Whitaker, Radiology Director, 606-726-2178.
