A Liberal Dilemma

A Muslim walks into a bar and kills 50 people. Cops shoot the Muslim. So who gets charged with the hate crime? The gun? The cop for shooting a Muslim? This is a dilemma for the liberals on who to blame! Blame everything but the Islamic Jihad terrorist.

The bodies didn't get time to get cold and the gun was to blame! The media is very cautious to say the shooter has Islamic ties. Obama and Hilary refuse to call it what it is. They all want stricter gun control. All the gun control in the world would have not prevented this shooting. A jihadist Islamic terrorist does not play by the rules of the land. That little book called the Koran that Muslims follow calls for these kind of killings.

I just don't understand how a gun can be blamed for this shooting. Should airplanes be banned? On 9-11 airplanes controlled by Muslims killed thousands of Americans. Should we ban cell phones? Thousands of American soldiers have been killed by Muslims using Cell phones to detonate IED's.

I heard a retired Navy Seal say it best about terrorists. He said it's like planting a tree in your yard. When the tree is first planted it is easy to be pulled up. Once the tree takes root it's hard to get it out. Terrorism is well rooted in and the politicians want to be politically correct.

Jihad in America is here to stay. Sharia law will over take our Constitution if we don't take a stand. With Sharia law more killings like the recent mass shooting will become more common. A woman is worthless under Sharia law. Jihad is coming after America like a biting dog while we blame a gun.

Now I don't believe in the lifestyle the people killed were living, but the Bible doesn't say to kill them, The Bible says to hate the sin and love the person.

I have learned a lot about Islam. The Koran says kill the infidel. The Koran says kill those living the gay lifestyle. The Koran teaches hatred instead of repentance and forgiveness like God's Word.

We will never defeat Islam with the politically correct attitude. I honestly believe that God is not going to put up with much more. I believe the end is very close. So repent and get right or get left. Don't be left behind during Tribulations!

Until next week, get out and enjoy God's creation!

Ground Feeding
Make a small ground feeding area by clearing some space under a bush. Cut away branches if you need to. No mulch; just dirt. And that's it. Toss white proso millet and/or safflower seed on the ground, and you'll have cardinals, red-wings, doves, buntings, sparrows and plenty more.

Potent fentanyl, mixed with heroin, drives 14.7 percent increase in fatal drug overdoses in Kentucky from 2014 to 2015

The number of drug-overdose fatalities in Kentucky rose almost 15 percent in 2015, driven by a 247 percent jump in deaths involving fentanyl, a highly potent opioid that some traffickers are mixing with heroin, the Kentucky Office of Drug Control Policy said Tuesday.

The office counted 1,248 fatal overdoses in Kentucky last year, up 14.7 percent from the 1,088 reported in 2014. Fentanyl was a factor in more than a third: 420, up from 121.

"Heroin was detected in 28 percent of cases, consistent with the previous year," the Justice and Public Safety Cabinet said in a press release. "However, as a total, heroin-related deaths increased in 2015, largely because the drug is being laced with fentanyl."

"The introduction of illicit fentanyl into the heroin trade is producing devastating results," Van Ingram, director of the office, said in the release. "Whether it's manufactured to resemble heroin or a prescription pill, the cartels have made an already dangerous situation worse."

Gov. Matt Bevin said, "I am heartbroken for the Commonwealth. More than three families a day are shattered by this epidemic of untimely death. This is unacceptable and will be vigorously addressed with every resource at our disposal."

The report by Ingram's office listed the eight counties with the most fatal overdoses per person from 2012 to 2015. All were in Eastern Kentucky or Northern Kentucky. Here are the counties, with the number of deaths per 10,000 people: Leslie, 6.86; Bell, 6.12; Gallatin, 5.26; Knott, 4.87; Wolfe, 4.83; Floyd, 4.76; Campbell, 4.72 per 100,000 and Kenton, 4.63 per 10,000.

Counties with big percentage increases in fatal overdoses from 2014 to 2015 included Bell, from 11 to 20; Boyd, from 13 to 24; Butler, from none to eight; Harlan, from six to 10; Kenton, from 71 to 112; Rowan, from five to 12;

Counties with large decreases in fatal overdoses from 2014 to 2015 included Bullitt, from 22 to 11; Grant, 13 to 6; Russell, from 13 to 7; Laurel, 18 to 10; Leslie, from nine to five; McCracken, 20 to 10; and Marshall, from 12 to fewer than five. The report does not list specific numbers for a county in years when the county had fewer than five fatal overdoses.

The figures above are based on where the death occurred. Based on the residence of the overdose victim, some counties ranked higher; for example, Powell County had 5.84 overdose deaths per 10,000 people, and Russell County had 4.95. This map shows rates based on the county where the overdose victims resided; note that it shows the death rate per 100,000 people, not 10,000 (a figure closer to the population of most counties).
