

Thirty-eight year old Jason Smith was named a Kentucky Heritage Farmer by the Irvine-Ravenna Kiwanis Club at its annual Farm-City Banquet held last Thursday at Rice Station Christian Church. He and his wife Brandi farm about 900 acres of corn, hay and soybeans. Smith indicated he needed all the help he could get and it was a "family thing" with help coming from family members.

'Innovative,' 'great service' and 'class act' were words used to describe Jim Hayes and his Irvine Community Television business. Presenter Carolyn Perkins said the Kiwanis was "very thankful for Jim Hayes and the cable office." Hayes and his cable system were named the 2018 Kiwanis Heritage Business on Thursday night at Rice Station Christian Church.

The Estill County Fair Board Association and the Estill County Farm Bureau inducted two more Estill Countians into the Estill County Agriculture Hall of Fame on Friday night at the Estill County Fair Barn. Local veterinarian L.W. Beckley was inducted along with Pepper Hardy.
