Just Hunting

by Steve Brewer

Well I am back from Saskatchewan, Canada, moose hunting, and we are ready to take you along with us, a journey in your mind. I have always been told, the best camera in the world, is your mind: it not only takes a picture, but stores a memory. This journey will be written about, in the coming weeks, as many as it takes. I want you to experience every mile, every emotion.

I left Irvine, from my house three hours late, waiting on my brother, and nephew to arrive from North Carolina. Keep in mind, I have hunted with my brother sixty plus years, and my nephew for forty. The only thing you can count on with those two, you can't count on them. They were supposed to be here at ten-thirty, on the evening of the twenty-sixth, but pulled into my driveway at one o'clock in the morning of the twenty-seventh. Oh well, at least they got here. I told my wife, they are always late. This will be no exception, although we need to be at the hunting lodge, by four o'clock Sunday evening. It is a twenty-four hundred mile trip, and we need to get going.

I was glad it was after dark, I am ashamed of the garbage along side of our roads, the ditches of my road full. Why people in our area throw out their garbage, is beyond me, I feel we are better than that. After we left Madison County, the garbage was gone, so it must have something to do with the mentality of our people, in this area of Kentucky.

As we ran well into the morning, and into the night, my big Silverado purred like it was supposed to, pulling the utility trailer, with our deep freezer inside. At our first stop, I knew nothing had changed from my last trip, out west with them, mule deer hunting. They are the only people I ever hunt with that can turn a fifteen minute gas and go into an hour pit stop.

My nephew, who by the way, moves like a sloth, had taken up smoking, and had to smoke two at every stop. Nope, he was not allowed to smoke in my truck. As I tried to explain to the two of them, just because "MapQuest" says it is a forty hour trip, doesn't mean it is a forty hour trip. I can't seem to get the message across to them.

We made it to Council Bluff, Iowa, and we were out of drivers. My nephew had an eye problem, and can't drive. The first thing the lady at the motel said, when I asked her if she had any rooms was, I bet you are from Kentucky. I said yes, and she said, she was from E-Town. She told me she and her husband had bought that motel in Iowa, because Kentucky was a lost cause, I never replied. While bringing the things we would need for the night, clean clothes, shaving kit and things like that, the room door was left open by my two buddies. The room filled quickly with all kinds of biting bugs. We paid the price with bug bites.

Next week, we will go into day two of our hunt for a big "Bull Moose". Till next week, be safe, and happy.
