Stickeler's Answer

Stickelers Answer

Each should play 32 minutes. There are 48 total minutes for any given game. Since only two forwards can play at any given time, and there are three forwards to split that time equally, each forward would play 2/3 of 48 or 32 minutes.

Just Hunting

by Steve Brewer

Well, as you know from last week, we arrived at the lodge, with just a few minutes to spare. I have never seen so many new, white GMC's lined up ready to pick up their hunters, to take them to the shooting range, to make sure we safely knew how to use our weapons, and knew how to shoot. Us, just getting there under the wire, were hurried to our guides, and we headed to the range.

There were Indian children, riding ponies, herds of horses everywhere, and the wind blowing like a freight train. It took my mind back to my childhood when life was worth living. Again, because of us being last to arrive, our guides were put into the back of the line, on everything. After we took one shot at one-hundred yards, another at two-hundred, we was clear to hunt.

The hunt would start the next day, we would leave the lodge at 5 a.m. We were told we needed to go to the grocery there on the reservation for whatever supplies we needed. We had already fueled once at "The Battlefords" which is the last big city before we entered the "First Nation's land. I knew gasoline was four-fifty a gallon and noticed the price also on the store inside the reservation; it also was four-fifty per gallon.

We went to their store, it was full of customers, and everyone there was just as happy; like it was Christmas time. Several of the people took time to ask a multitude of questions; I tried to answer each one. Over to our first stop, the beer cooler. Oh yes, there was "Bud Light." I knew it was going to be a good hunt, they had "Bud Light". We threw six cases onto the cart, and moved to the coffee. Oh yes again, they had our brand; things really looking up now. We got a couple gallons of milk, some cereal, some sandwich meat, bread, and of course apples.

We finally made it to the check-out, those people actually let us in front of them, so we could check out. Would that happen here? Then the wheels came off. The beer was fifty-four ninety-nine a case, the milk was five dollars and ninety-nine a gallon, the loaves of bread, almost four dollars a loaf. My brother and his son called a quick time out, to discuss the cost of everything. They decided to put back three cases of "Bud Light", two gallons of the milk, and one loaf of bread. For the life of me, I can't reason why anyone would go on a trip, to anywhere, and not have the money.

We paid and loaded the truck, and I pulled around to fuel up. I was glad the Outfitter was using his trucks; of course, at eight thousand dollars, he should be. We went back to the lodge, unloaded everything, and readied for tomorrow's hunt. There is where we pick up, for our final installment of your, and mine, trip to Canada. See, I told you, there is more to hunting than just pulling a trigger.

See you next week.
