"I may be from Wisconsin, but now I think a part of me is from Ravenna and Irvine," stated Eric Hendrickson, Director of Network Planning for CSX.

He told Chris Campbell, president of Kentucky Steam Engine Heritage Corp., that CSX was now giving them a diesel locomotive. It was originally an L&N engine, 1100, which worked in Ravenna, Irvine, and Estill County.

Campbell said the Steam Engine Heritage Corp. is a 100 percent volunteer organization.

In the last few weeks, those volunteers re-laid railroad tracks by hand to connect the rails to the Steam Heritage building where 2716 was taken on Sunday evening.

Both CSX and Corman Railroads were thanked for making the Heritage Highball possible with the use of their tracks.
